Practical-professional profile of the course and industry sector of reference	The Master course trains professionals in communication and event organization, focusing on creating and strategically managing digital content that is increasingly in demand by the industry. In particular, the Master course trains professionals who can effectively respond to the complexity of today's job market, which is no longer satisfied by exclusively technical or exclusively humanistic profiles. In this perspective, speculative content is accompanied by skills of use and the languages that express them. The internal articulation includes three macro areas: institutional communication and new media, event and advertising campaign concept and design, and organization and promotion of cultural enterprises. Business workshops, project work, and practical activity as an intern complete an educational proposal in which great attention is given to listening to and critically interpreting the demands put forward by the industry. By the end of the Master course, students will have acquired a range of expertise and experiences regarding communicative processes and declinations in different languages and contexts. The skills of devising, designing, and implementing intervention models are essential for anyone aspiring to professions associated with communication. The study of technological-multimedia and linguistic-communicational grammars and their practice within different communication environments enables the students to master the increasingly complex and sophisticated communication tools in all their expressions and applications with awareness and competence.
